A year-long celebration for Clemson University Emeritus College

By Diane Smathers, director, Clemson Emeritus College

Clemson University Emeritus College is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year. A committee chaired by Professor Emerita Lucy Rollin has been guiding the yearlong celebration. Beginning in January 2013, large celebration banners hung from the light posts around campus. Shortly thereafter a unique reception highlighted ways emeriti have re-imagined retirement through creative endeavors.

At Emeritus Day held in October, the college announced its first endowment for emeriti, a $25,000 gift to support the Distinguished Emeriti Award, and recognized past award recipients, board members and donors. In December, the yearlong celebration will conclude with a holiday reception and unveiling of a photo book, compiled by emeriti, which depicts the college's history.

Surveys: an Important Advocacy Tool

By Sue Barnes, AROHE President

AROHE resources can help you develop a powerful tool to demonstrate the contributions of your campus' retired faculty and staff. A well-designed survey that shows the depth and breadth of retiree contributions through teaching, research and volunteerism can be used for many purposes, including advocating for increased campus funding or retiree benefits.

CUCEA (the Council of University of California Emeriti Associations) is a UC system-wide association with representatives from each UC campus. CUCEA conducts a survey of UC emeriti accomplishments every three years. The results of the survey are compiled into a report that is shared with the UC Office of the President as well as the chancellors and other leaders on each of the campuses. This survey report has been effectively used to retain and enhance retiree benefits, including retiree health care, campus-funded retiree centers and reduced or free retiree parking on several UC campuses.

Inside Higher Ed Article highlights Emeritus Colleges: AROHE Quoted

A growing trend in higher education – the emeritus college – was featured in a recent article on the Inside Higher Ed website. Emeritus colleges are an intellectual bridge to that offer opportunities for emeriti to continue their contributions to their campuses with a variety of scholarly activities and programs. On the campuses where such colleges have been developed, administrators have deemed them a good return on investment.

The article quotes AROHE board members Janette Brown (University of Southern California Emeriti Center and Emeriti College), John Bugge (Emory University Emeritus College) and Sue Barnes (UC Davis Retiree Center).
